Practice Emphasis

Shareholder Lené Alley DeRudder is a collaboratively trained divorce attorney with strong litigation skills. She takes a strategic approach to problem solving and helping guide clients to resolution – both inside and outside of the courtroom. She focuses on highly complex divorces – specifically those involving high-value and/or extensive property issues, as well as contentious family law matters. A respected and recognized leader in the family law community, Lené has appeared as a guest on broadcast television and radio nationwide. She primarily practices in Collin, Dallas, and Denton counties.

Representative Matters

- Represented numerous high net-worth clients in divorces that involved marital assets and estates at or above $5 million in value, and obtained disproportionate divisions of property for clients.
- Represented numerous clients in complex divorces where multiple business entities were involved, including entities formed for purposes of real estate investment.
- Obtained exclusive right to designate primary residence for mother in highly contentious matter where custody evaluation was in favor of the father.
- Obtained exclusive right to designate primary residence for a father in week-long jury trial in Collin County.
- Obtained a reversal and remand on appeal in termination of a father’s parental rights.
- Successful and extensive track record of obtaining favorable results for clients in informal and formal settlement.
